Forecast for Saturday 18 Dec 2021

Weather: Staying dry, however the cloud cover is much harder to pin down. Above the inversion (around 600m) cloud free skies are expected, however at mid-levels cloud is likely to be quite persistent in the west, less so in the east allowing the risk of fog around the foothills, also occasional bright and sunny intervals by day

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: Generally 100% but chance of cloud below the inversion.

Visibility: Mostly good or very good, but very poor in any areas of cloud below the inversion

Met Office Aberdeen Meteorologist's View
The dominant area of high pressure brings a strong inversion, with highest temperatures across the peaks significantly warmer than around the foothills.

Forecast for Sunday 19 Dec 2021
Weather: Again it will be difficult to pin down the cloud detail with subtle small changes bringing significant differences for location of the most favoured peaks. Staying dry again with clear skies above the inversion that slowly lifts from the north later in the day. Mid-level cloud patchier than Saturday affording a little more in the way of bright and sunny spells.

Maximum wind: Variable 10mph or less, mainly from the east or northeast.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: Generally 100% but also variable amounts of cloud below the inversion.

Visibility: Good or very good, becoming very poor in cloud.

Temperature: Glens: Minus 2 Celsius increasing 7 Celsius
At 800m: Plus 5 Celsius becoming Zero Celsius late evening
Freezing level: Generally above summits but sub-zero layer at mid-levels later
